Our Founder's Story

One Call Changed Everything

The nurse handed me the phone and said I was allowed one phone call. One call to decide where the rest of my life would begin...

It was discharge day at the detox center, and after a week inside, I was leaving with only the clothes on my back and a bus pass. No home. No job. No plan.

Who do you call when you have nowhere to go?

That one call led me to a Goodwill shelter and a single mat on the floor. I begged them to save that mat for me. It was the only thing standing between me and going back to a life I had barely survived. By then, I had lost almost everything a person can lose. My family's trust. My job. My apartment. Even the papers that proved who I was. All I had left was one last chance. And just enough willingness to take it.

Then a Recovery Residence opened its doors to me.

It wasn't a miracle. It was a clean bed in a safe, substance-free home. It was the women down the hall who had walked my road and understood my fear, because they had felt it too. It was counseling that helped me untangle the trauma beneath my substance use. And it was time, which turned out to be the thing I needed most.

The changes came in small, ordinary moments. I slept in a real bed. I built a resume and earned my first paycheck in years. When I was too afraid to walk into a doctor's office after years away, a volunteer drove me there and sat beside me in the waiting room. Slowly, I rebuilt the relationship with my mother that substance use had nearly destroyed.

My name is Tiffany Knight and I have been substance-free since October 19, 2002. I have not walked a single day of this journey alone. The second chance I was given is the reason In the Meantime exists.

Today, another woman is standing where I once stood.

Here is something most people don't know. After leaving detox or treatment, most women have no choice but to return to the very environment that fueled their substance use disorder. And research shows that more than one in four return to substance use on the very day they are discharged, while close to two out of three use again within the first month. It's not a matter of willpower. It's having a supportive, substance-free place to go when the doors close behind you. Studies show, people given a room in a recovery home were about half as likely to be using two years later as those who left treatment with ordinary follow-up care alone. Half.

A safe bed turns out to be one of the most powerful things you can give a person in early recovery. But, there simply aren't enough beds, and for the women coming out of treatment unemployed, no way to pay when and if she finds one.

Since we opened our doors in October 2024, In the Meantime has received 64 applications and housed 17 women, each for an average of 4 to 6 months. Many have moved on to lasting, long-term recovery. But the gap between the women who apply and the women we can house is real. Filling that gap does not just change her life. Researchers who tracked the full cost of recovery housing, including hospital care, jail time, and lost work, found it returned roughly $29,000 per resident to the community over two years. When a woman gets a safe place to land, the whole community gets something back. Her children get their mother. An employer gets a reliable worker. A neighborhood gets a neighbor.

She will arrive the way I did: no job, no car, no savings, and a family whose trust she is only beginning to earn back.

Will you give another woman the same chance someone once gave me?

About Us

empowering women to recover together

In The Meantime (ITM), a South Carolina Alliance for Recovery Residences (SCARR) Level III Certified recovery residence, was founded with a clear and heartfelt mission: to offer women emerging from treatment and detox centers a secure and supportive transitional housing environment while they engage in outpatient treatment. Our goal is to provide a stable and nurturing space where recovery can truly begin and flourish.

At ITM, we understand that the journey to recovery is both challenging and transformative. Our home is designed to be a safe haven—a place where women take their first, crucial steps toward rebuilding their lives in a safe, substance-free environment. Here, residents find not only a place to stay but also a community of women who are on the same path, each committed to their own recovery and supporting each other's journeys.

Our commitment is rooted in the belief that everyone deserves the opportunity to recover with dignity and hope. At ITM, residents are surrounded by resources and support tailored to assist them in forging a transformational yet personal recovery journey.

We offer a range of services, including:

- Safe Transitional Housing: A comfortable and secure living space where residents focus on recovery without the pressures of finding housing or dealing with external stressors.
- Structured Support: Access to counseling, mentorship, and group therapy that fosters personal growth and strengthens long-term recovery.
- Community and Connection: Opportunities to build meaningful relationships with fellow residents who share goals and challenges, creating a supportive network of peers.
- Resources and Assistance: Guidance in navigating outpatient treatment programs, job placement services, and other resources necessary for a successful transition to independent living.

At ITM, we believe that recovery is not just about abstaining from substances but about women reclaiming their lives and finding a renewed sense of purpose. We support them every step of the way, providing the tools and encouragement they need to thrive. Everyone deserves a chance to heal and grow, and we are honored to be a part of that journey.

Vision

Our ultimate vision is to create a network of safe spaces across the country so no woman in recovery has to return to the environment that contributed to her substance use disorder.

Mission

We're on a mission to provide women leaving detox and treatment centers a safe, substance-free housing community to support them while they engage in an outpatient program on their journey to recover and return to society.

About The Event

Beyond Recovery: From Surviving to Thriving at In the Meantime

More Than a Dinner: A Community Activation

This inaugural Recovery Stability Dinner is the premier gathering for leaders in SC Sandhills region who are committed to solving one of our community's most pressing challenges: the gap between clinical treatment and long-term stability for women in recovery. While many programs focus on the initial days of sobriety, In the Meantime focuses on what comes next.

This evening is a celebration of resilience and a strategic convening of the partners — families, employers, healthcare providers, financial institutions, and civic leaders — who make sustainable recovery possible.

The program is designed to be informative, inspiring, and professionally relevant for our guests:

- Keynote Speaker: A featured presentation from Maureen Cavanagh, a regional leader in the recovery movement, will share insights on the national landscape of recovery housing and its impact on local communities.
- Resident Impact Story: A firsthand account of the journey from treatment to stability, highlighting the tangible outcomes made possible by our community partners.
- Strategic Networking: An opportunity to connect with ~100 of the region's most influential voices in healthcare, business, and civic leadership.

We aren't just hosting a dinner; we're building a bridge. And, we are inviting you to be part of the foundation.
